Take Place in Boston, May 20-21

WAKEFIELD, Mass., USA – May 5, 2010 – The International Technology Law Association (ITechLaw; <http://www.itechlaw.org>) will hold its 2010 World Technology Law Conference and Annual Meeting in Boston, Massachusetts, USA, May 20-21, at The Charles Hotel.

ITechLaw is the premier organization for lawyers in the technology sector worldwide. The annual conference (<http://www.itechlaw.org/boston2010/index.shtml>) draws attendees from around the globe, and features international speakers on the major topics in technology law, including contracting and outsourcing, intellectual property, data protection and privacy, mobile computing, file sharing and social networking, and green tech and emerging technologies.

"With the rapid pace of technological change, it's important to keep up to speed. This conference addresses today's most pressing issues, with panels and sessions led by the finest minds in technology law," said Ursula Widmer, president of ITechLaw and partner at Dr. Widmer & Partners in Berne, Switzerland. "As a major technology hub and a global engine for innovation, Boston is an ideal setting for our conference."

In addition to presentations by top practitioners in technology law, including in-house counsel from cutting-edge companies, attendees will enjoy a variety of networking events. According to Widmer, another of the primary functions of the conference is to strengthen existing relationships and build new ones during networking lunches, breaks, and other social events. As a further attendee benefit, Continuing Legal Education (CLE) credit will be offered for many U.S. states.

Registration is open to ITechLaw members and non-members; registration by non-members of ITechLaw includes a complimentary membership in ITechLaw, valid through June 30, 2011.
